I've been mulling getting a Discover card for the last couple months, for a couple reasons: I don't have a Discover so it'd diversify me a little bit and the double first 12 months cashback.

Saving light bulbs also contain mercury. Mercury is a metal that's in liquid form at room temperature. It's that (if that term even exists, lol) I don't know what's the big deal when you mention that.

These brave Corinthians batter and bash their bodies in a multitude of ways.

That arrangement put Rubik in the spotlight because the magic cube was renamed after its inventor in 1980.

But over the years, some companies have grown so large that they quietly crossed a line, acting more like drug manufacturers than pharmacies that prepare drugs for individual patients.
